

ABSTRACT

A tool for installation of an auxiliary seat of the type that includes a transverse channel for receiving a seat belt. An elongated unitary member includes hooks adjacent its opposed ends. Each hook lies within one of two orthogonal planes with the maximum dimension of one hook being less than the height and that of the other hook being less than the width of the transverse channel.